

Rede in Sofia, Bulgarien - Konferenz “New Leaders of Europe”

12. April 2024, Nicolas A. Rimoldi

My dear brothers in arms

A bit more than 3 decades ago, Europe breathed a sigh of relief. Anyone with a shred of decency saw the dissolution of the Soviet Union not as some sort of victory over the people who were forced to participate in it. Instead they viewed it as the final, decisive blow to the most murderous, inhumane, despicable, delusional, genocidal idea ever known to mankind. Having consigned over 100 million souls to oblivion, communism entered the annals of our collective consciousness as yet another failed attempt at subjugating the individual in service of the ever elusive concept of „the greater good“.

Naturally, those who had anointed themselves as the leaders of that collective, were less than pleased. But instead of finally burying the rotting corpse of their failed ideology, they instead decided to keep it on life support. And we are now witnessing their efforts to finally revive it. Once more the siren song of the greater good is being played to the masses. And once again the same sacrifice is demanded. Give up your individuality, cast aside your identity, forego your personality and surrender the very core of your being to those who claim to act in the name of the collective. And once again, the most outlandish promises are being made to those who are willing to give up the very essence of what makes them human.

Peace, abundance and security await us, if we just submit. Just leave the decision making up to the EU, to NATO, to the UN, to the WEF, to the WHO and any other organisation of experts, who command you from far away and know nothing of your life, your needs, your troubles or circumstances. If you refuse in any way, you stand against the greater good and are thus evil incarnate. You think you are Bulgarian, Swiss or Hungarian? You think you can take responsibility for your own life? You think your achievements as well as mistakes are your own? You think you can make decisions for yourself? How backwards. How pedestrian. How rancid. Only the collective can do that, led by people who are obviously your superiors in every imaginable way.

If you feel in any way offended by this line of thought, then you should know that the attack on everything you hold dear is already in full swing. As I am speaking, the people who think they represent the greater good are hard at work consolidating their power. The nation state, evolved over centuries and built on shared values of what it means to be a truly functioning community, is being eroded. It's ability to govern itself is being stripped away and handed to the globalist collective. A collective that will cram down its idea of „one size fits all“, regardless of the damage it causes, mirroring the failings of the Soviet Union I mentioned at the beginning. The pandemic treaty and international health regulations, just to name two, are prime examples of how sovereignty is wrestled away from the citizens and their states and handed to unelected bureaucrats under the guise of safety. The power to enact policy is given to those who will never have to pay the price when it fails and enforced on those who never had a say in whether they agree.

But it is up to us to show the people that we can and should be different while remaining good neighbours. It is up to us to demonstrate that our differences are what makes us successful and enable us to cooperate with others on equal footing. And in order to do so, we must remain independent and retain our national autonomy. A strong and prosperous Europe is only possible, if the people living within it can carve out their own path in accordance with their own preferences. You do not need the same rules as Germans do, nor do I think you would want them. I would like to think that you prefer to live under the rules that suit you best and which you had an active part in creating.

Ralf Dahrendorf said that the nation state is the only environment in which the constitution of freedom can thrive. He was right...which means we are engaged in the very battle that will determine whether our descendants will grow up as slaves or free men and women. A battle against the globalists, who are reaching once more for power no human is fit to yield. A battle we must win at all costs if we wish to defend our home. Luckily, we stand on the shoulders of giants. Heroic generations before us have fought and won this battle before and we have a historic responsibility to save our people and our nations. Let's live up to this responsibility together and give the globalists the only reply they deserve when they greedily demand we bend the knee to their self declared expertise and authority. And that answer is „NO!“

As a young man of 29, I know one thing for sure: Our countries will remain sovereign. We are free men and women. And we will not eat the bugs and we will be happy!
